Dear Ms. Ignagni:

I read with interest your statement in response to Secretary Sebelius's letter on premium hikes by insurance companies. You wrote, "It's a basic law of economics that additional benefits incur additional costs, and the impact on premiums depends on the type and amount of coverage policyholders had before."

As long as we are abiding by the basic laws of economics, we can all agree that with bigger profits should come lower premiums.

Given that the second quarter earnings reports of your member organizations show billions more in profits over last year, I am eager to hear how you intend to share these profits with policyholders.

Sincerely,

Pete Stark
